

Unbridled hybrid brass band

Sergent Pèpère

Between brass band and mini-big fairground band, Sergent Pèpère, come back their new show : Du vent sous les robes (wind under the dresses). With its forever shimmering rhythms, the band mixes with ingenuity, sounding and scenic humour, melodic emotion and harmonic wealth.

Under their starry and brassy vault, zebra striped flashing coming from the Balkans, from jazz or from Latino, it is hot under the helmets with a music you listen to and a music you dance on ! Indoor or outdoor, across France and Europe, Sergent Pèpère has been giving happiness and pleasure to children and grown up for more than 10 years now.

Nestor Pizzaiolo > Accordion, singer – Archie Sec > Saxophones – Lino Van Tuyo > Soubassophone, trumpet
Stanislas Slacouldous > Trombone – Tristan Vandelair > Drums – Le Gros Saphir > Percussions, chat

Press extracts

Wild Polka, bohemian jazz, oriental group... The Sergent Pèpère's mix is astonish!

Ouest-France

There is the Sergent Pèpère, and the show goes on with their delirious musical show with its mimes, acrobatic gags with 6 cranks outfitted kind of serbo-croatian middle age style! (Lester Bowie's brass band is not so far): a real success!

Jazz Hot

With this psyche name, a crazy and coloured direction, and a singular instrumentation, Sergent Pèpère is remarkable in the middle of the happy brass bands. Precise, falsely chaotic, their music blows and tinkles with class and impudence, with simple fancy. Not folk: but rare; I said!

Radio Ceros

The 6 musicians, or I should say "the folklorico-mobil disarming commando" as they say themselves, proposed some jazz, gipsy songs, ouzbeks, latino with casualness. Good mood fot sure!
